Reel View

Some say that spring showers bring May flowers. In our industry, we know that spring showers also bring sediment, and keeping that sediment out of job site inlets is of the utmost importance.

Fortunately, Dandy makes it easy and affordable to keep sediment out of inlets to help you stay regulation-compliant.
Watch this short video on our extremely popular Dandy Bag, and you'll quickly see why it's one of the most cost-effective and versatile sediment-control solutions on the market today.

Maryland Storm Water Management News is Food for Thought

At Dandy, we constantly scour the web and other news sources for information and articles we think our customers might find useful. This article out of Maryland is one such piece.
Even if you don't build in Maryland, we think this article is worth a read. If you haven't encountered ordinances like these yet, chances are, you will.

Dandy's Spotlight Distributor for May

Vitals: Axela Services is a material supplier for infrastructure marketing (New York State DOT, Port Authority of NY & NJ, DEP, DPW) specializing in imbedded concrete items, steel reinforcement, bridge and forming hardware, curing products, concrete repair products, geotextiles, and erosion control. Maria Famoso is the President of Axela Services, which is a certified Women-owned Business Enterprise.

Current Project: Axela Services is currently providing material for the construction of the Bay Runway at JFK Airport in New York, one of the longest runways in the world, and the most used at JFK. It will be an emergency landing site for the space shuttle as it is 14,572 feet long.

What's in the name: Axela Services is the owner's teenage daughters name, Alexa, spelled backwards. She has absolutely no interest in the construction material supply business except on Halloween, when she enjoys dressing like a construction worker.

Construction Site Sediment Control ... Simple Solutions to a Complex Challenge

Anyone dealing with construction site regulation compliance issues knows that it's not an easy job. Federal, state and local laws impact many facets of construction work, and keeping up with what seem to be constant changes can be overwhelming. Compliance with the laws is vital, though, no matter how new they are. The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) takes its job of enforcing laws very seriously, as evidenced ... Keeping Construction Materials Out of Storm Water

Remember that construction materials like cement and lime pose pollution hazards to the environment. Keep them protected from rain with waterproof materials like plastic sheeting or tarps. Make sure that bags aren't ripped, left exposed, or able to blow or wash away in a storm event.

Take these simple precautions to keep materials you bring onto a worksite out of storm water. By doing so, you'll extend the life of your inlet protection products and keep them performing their best with less maintenance required. You'll also make site inspectors, and the environment, a whole lot happier.

Dandy Facts

1. In the right conditions, bamboo can grow up to 2 inches per hour.
2. The average person will shed more than 40 pounds of skin in his or her lifetime.
3. A Boeing 707 uses four thousand gallons of fuel in its take-off climb.
4. Based on speeds recorded during level flying, the fastest bird known to man is the spine-tailed swift. It can fly up to 106mph. The Peregrine Falcon is the fastest bird - and in fact, the fastest animal - known to man when in its hunting dive, which can reach speeds of over 200 mph.
5. It takes 70% less energy to produce a ton of paper from recycled paper than from trees.
